SAINT JOHN'S HEALTH CENTER FOUNDATION

OUR MISSION

To provide leadership and philanthropic support to Providence Saint John's Health Center, Saint John's Cancer Institute and Pacific Neuroscience Institute that serve as catalysts for exceptional health care and research.

“ There is GREAT POWER in PARTNERSHIP and all it can accomplish. With the resounding SUCCESS of this campaign, you – our donors, our physicians, our friends – have propelled Saint John's TO THE NEXT LEVEL OF EXCELLENCE for generations to come.”

PROGRESS THROUGH THE POWER OF PARTNERSHIP

Three years ago, Saint John's Health Center Foundation launched the Power of Partnership fundraising campaign to continue changing and saving lives in our community. Thanks to the amazing philanthropic support of trustees and donors, I gratefully announce that the Power of Partnership campaign has been the most successful fundraising endeavor in the 46-year history of the Foundation. This aptly named campaign has raised more than $213 million and is a testament to the benevolence of our friends and neighbors whose donations have made a tremendous impact in transforming our health center.

The generosity of our donor partners ensures our neighborhood hospital acquires advanced technology, engages in groundbreaking research and attracts prominent physicians and scientists. The power to procure state-of-the-art equipment and talent elevates Saint John's level of medicine and enhances our personalized and compassionate patient care. Our beloved health center excels in providing an exceptional patient experience that would otherwise not be possible without the generosity of philanthropic gifts that drive our leading-edge care. Thank you for choosing to support Saint John's Health Center Foundation and sharing in the remarkable advancements at your community hospital. As always, our partner in excellence is you.

OVERCOMING CHALLENGES, TOGETHER WE SUCCEED

Beginning in early 2020, the COVID-19 pandemic tested all of us—mentally, physically, emotionally and spiritually—like nothing before in our lifetime. There were obvious as well as untold challenges to the health care community that are still being confronted today. Yet, despite the trials of COVID-19, Providence Saint John's Health Center has continued to provide excellence in service and award-winning care in a healing environment. I attribute this to the commitment of our amazing caregivers, nurses and physicians together with our generous donors. Forming strong partnerships will change the face of medicine—donors will provide the funds, researchers the science, physicians the treatment and patients the courage that we witness every day.

The overwhelming success of the Power of Partnership campaign demonstrates Saint John's strong ties and service to the community as well as the integral role our private donors play in upholding our exceptional health center. The resilience of our nurses, doctors, caregivers, technicians, therapists and all of our staff members who meet our high professional standards during these demanding times reveal why Saint John's is a nationally recognized facility that our community can be proud of and why we continue to be the pride of the Westside.

EXCEEDING OUR GOAL AND EXCEEDINGLY GRATEFUL

Philanthropy is a key component in funding community hospitals. Without the generosity of our private donors, the clinical performance and compassionate care we expect from Providence Saint John's Health Center would be difficult to achieve. The overwhelming success of our three-year Power of Partnership campaign is a testament to our donors and Saint John's leadership who propel us to reach the next level of excellence.

The initial fundraising goal was to secure $150 million to drive advancements in technology, research and education. To date, we've received $213 million, exceeding our original goal by more than $60 million. The Power of Partnership campaign began with our campaign committee and was driven by our trustees and donors who inspire us and share in serving our community. Our trustees and donors have transformed Saint John's from a small community hospital into a world-class health center. It's a team effort that attests to the power of partnership.

COVID-19

Treating a novel illness such as COVID-19 requires specialized resources including sophisticated equipment and a high-skilled, multidisciplinary team. Saint John's has been a leader in treating patients affected by the pandemic—a remarkable position for a community hospital to have historical impact on the community and the lives of so many patients. Our university-level health care has been made possible by a generous donation from the Jean Perkins Foundation that provided funds to buy seven extracorporeal membrane oxygenation (ECMO) machines. In addition, the gift helps Saint John's attract top doctors and researchers. Having director of critical care and pulmonologist Terese C. Hammond, MD, and cardiothoracic surgeon Raymond C. Lee, MD, who are both experienced using ECMO, made Saint John's an early difference maker in treating the pandemic. Both doctors believed ECMO, which is used for other respiratory illnesses, could be a game changer for COVID-19 patients, including surfer and LAPD detective Michael Chang (pictured here).

When Chang was transferred into Saint John's, he was critically ill and on a ventilator with failing lungs. He was treated with ECMO, the advanced life-support system that provides heart and lung bypass support. ECMO sends oxygen to the blood allowing the organs to rest and recover. During the pandemic, Saint John's became a go-to destination for some of the most critically ill patients, such as Chang, who spent seven days on ECMO and was able to leave the hospital after 10 days.

“By the time data started coming in from other parts of the world on using ECMO, we had already been utilizing it for our COVID patients and had the largest treatment center in the western part of the United States and one of the largest experiences in America,” says Dr. Lee. Saint John's made a tremendous impact on treating COVID-19 in our community due to the generous philanthropic support of the Jean Perkins Foundation and our skilled doctors. “We have people alive today because of ECMO and the generosity of our donors,” adds Dr. Hammond.

NEUROSCIENCES

By 2030, it's estimated that 7.7 million people over age 65 will have Alzheimer's disease, which is more than a 50% increase over the number of people who currently have the disease. Current research, clinical trials and treatments have so far been ineffective in discovering a cure or finding breakthrough therapies for Alzheimer's. In addition to the human toll, Alzheimer's health care costs are expected to rise to more than $1 trillion over the next decade. Recently, efforts at Saint John's have been accelerated thanks to a $40 million gift from Will and Cary Singleton to the Saint John's Health Center Foundation and allocated to the Pacific Brain Health Center at the Pacific Neuroscience Institute.

The donation supports expanding the neurological team and accelerating advanced research. So far, progress has been made in critical core areas including clinical research, neuroimaging, neurogenomics and biomarkers. Saint John's will focus on developing novel ways to diagnose and treat the disease by initiating a five-year multi-study program for clinical trials and research activity. In addition, research is underway to uncover the underlying causes of Alzheimer's that can ultimately lead to breakthroughs for prevention and cures.

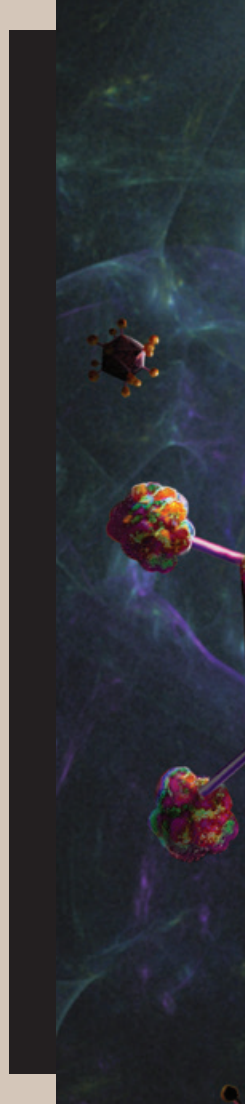

Pacific Brain Health Center's innovative interdisciplinary approach to improve early detection, identify risk factors, reduce risk and discover lifestyle and medicine interventions is designed to help those with cognitive decline. As the numbers of patients with Alzheimer's and dementia continue to grow, Saint John's, thanks to the Singleton's extraordinary philanthropy, is now poised to lead the way in correcting this crisis and improving the lives of patients and their families.

CANCER

Immunotherapy and precision genomic medicine are transformative cancer treatments. After colon cancer survivor Harold Brown was diagnosed with melanoma, he was beyond grateful to have novel immunotherapy—which uses the body’s immune system to fight cancer—as a treatment option to chemotherapy. “Compared to the chemotherapy I went through, immunotherapy was better. I feel good, and my worst response to it is itching,” says Brown. Due to his experience with cancer and gratification toward his care at the Saint John’s Cancer Institute (SJCI) at Providence Saint John’s Health Center, he wanted to help other people with cancer by gifting $8 million to establish the Rosalie and Harold Rae Brown Cancer Immunotherapy Research Program, named to honor his parents.

Brown’s donation to the program was the largest single donation in the history of SJCI and has been designated to advance research in immunotherapy. Our immunotherapy and precision medicine teams work hand in hand, as precision genomic medicine helps reveal cancer mutations to determine the best utilization of immunotherapy or other targeted treatments for patients. In the past 20 years, immunotherapy research and clinical trials have advanced cancer treatments, first with melanoma, then expanding to lung, bladder, brain, head and neck, kidney, colon and breast cancers. Immunotherapy and precision genomic medicine have the potential to change how doctors treat cancer to improve patients’ lives with fewer side effects and better outcomes and the potential to cure and prevent cancer. Brown desired to help accelerate and advance immunology research and when presenting his gift said, “This kind of gift helps everyone with cancer. That’s what it’s all about.”

WOMEN'S HEALTH

The Henry L. Guenther Foundation has gifted the Margie Petersen Breast Center at Providence Saint John's Health Center $423,000 for the state-of-the-art Affirm Prone Biopsy & Brevera Breast Biopsy System (APBBB System). The APBBB System is used to further diagnosis a patient after a suspicious mammogram. Using this specialized table allows more efficiency and accuracy for the medical team to have a 360-degree view of the breast with the patient laying on her stomach during the biopsy. It also provides patients with more physical and emotional comfort than the upright stereotactic breast biopsy, where the patient sees the needle. Stereotactic breast biopsy using the APBBB System generates high-definition images in real time that can pinpoint subtle lesions and identify faint calcifications, making the procedure go more quickly and effectively.

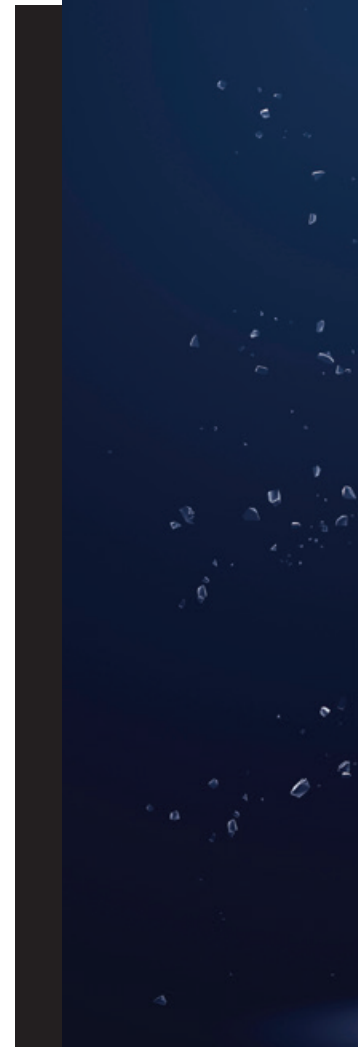

Having the best tools available ensures better patient care and an overall exceptional experience. "At the Margie Petersen Breast Center, we strive to provide highly personalized, compassionate care, and the APBBB System reduces stress for our patients. The superior technology, while designed for patient comfort, also allows fast, accurate biopsies," states Janie Grumley, MD, FACS, director of the Margie Petersen Breast Center at Saint John's Health Center. Grumley adds, "We are grateful to the Henry L. Guenther Foundation for providing funds for the APBBB System. Their generosity helps us provide elevated care and makes Saint John's a world-class center in our community." Guenther Foundation Chairman Susanne Sundberg states, "Philanthropy for new medical technology ensures the public will benefit, and the doctors at Saint John's have a stellar reputation for using advanced technologies to treat those in our community with medical excellence and compassion."

DIGESTIVE HEALTH

“Motown made music for all of us. Health care should be the same way,” states Motown founder and music legend Berry Gordy Jr. regarding his $1 million donation to fund the Berry Gordy Clinical Research Laboratory at Providence Saint John’s Health Center. Gordy wants to help address disparities in health care that cause too many Black people and those in other ethnic minority groups to suffer disproportionately from preventable disease. His gift to the Digestive Health Institute will fund clinical research on gastrointestinal disease treatments that will help extend and save lives.

Gordy believes in the Saint John’s mission to bring health care to underserved people in the community by educating and building trust, which can improve quality of life and strengthen communities. Saint John’s patient-centric doctors will be leading the charge in reaching populations in need. “They are brilliant and patient. And they seem to go beyond their call of duty. They took care of me like a brother, father or grandfather. I thought I was so special. Then I found out they do that with everyone!” says Gordy. The more Gordy learned about Saint John’s, the more he saw an opportunity to make an impact in the community with his donation. He hopes that other philanthropists will be inspired by his gift. Gordy states, “What we’ve learned during this pandemic is how the health of one of us can affect the health of all of us. Saint John’s can be a driving force to finding a solution. I love just being a part of that legacy.”

RESEARCH

Saint John's researchers work diligently to understand, diagnose and innovate treatments for diseases that cause human suffering. During the COVID-19 pandemic, Saint John's Cancer Institute pivoted to help support COVID-19 clinical and translational research. Saint John's contributed on a large scale to the advancement of science and research trials impacting current therapies including the antiviral drug remdesivir and monoclonal antibody medication sarilumab. In addition, the expertise of the biorepository program has been beneficial in collecting COVID-19 biological samples and establishing a database to further COVID-19 research at Saint John's as well as in collaboration with other institutions.

Advances in cancer research and clinical trials continue at Saint John's Cancer Institute. A generous $1 million gift from Kathleen McCarthy Kostlan, chair of the Thomas and Dorothy Leavey Foundation, supports the Cancer Research Initiative at Saint John's Cancer Institute. The Leavey Foundation, founded by Kostlan's parents in 1952, has a legacy of charitable giving to Saint John's totaling $11.7 million over the past 40 years. The tremendous support of the Leavey Foundation helps fulfill Saint John's mission as a unique community-based cancer research and training institute. Kostlan is proud of her family's giving legacy and encourages others to join in supporting the community. "It's very rewarding to see change, and if you can do anything to help that along, it's the best we can do while we're here," says Kostlan.

EDUCATION

Training the next generation of doctors, nurses and surgeons ensures that best practices are taught, performed and improved upon. Fellowships provide comprehensive educational and hands-on experience for fellows, preparing them for laboratory research, clinical trials, best medical practices as well as treating patients with compassion and respect. The Donald L. Morton, MD, Complex General Surgical Oncology Fellowship at Saint John's Cancer Institute (SJCI) received a $175,000 donation from the Harold McAlister Charitable Foundation to continue its stellar fellowship program. Patrick McAlister, president of the McAlister Foundation states, "As one of the largest training programs in the country, SJCI is vital to the community, and the fellows they train will go on to have an impact across the country and world."

The establishment of the Breast Surgical Oncology Fellowship training program at SJCI was initially funded with a $100,000 challenge gift from Bonnie and Joseph Otting. After spreading the word about their donation and the need for additional funds, the Otting's friends and colleagues responded with over $80,000 in support of the fellowship. Their collective generosity in turn motivated others in the community to donate to the program, altogether providing $250,000 toward training the next generation of breast surgical oncologists. The fellowship will instruct surgeons in newer techniques for treating breast cancer, such as oncoplastic surgery and intraoperative radiation therapy. Very few breast fellowships in the U.S. provide training to perform these transformative treatments. "It's vital for more women to have access to these less-invasive options offered by new techniques, and supporting this fellowship ensures more doctors will be able to perform and teach these new treatments," says Bonnie Otting.

In addition to tomorrow's surgeons, the education and training of nurses is at the forefront of medical instruction. Nurses spend more time in direct contact with patients, delivering care and interacting with families to provide comfort. To assist future nurses in their schooling, 19 nursing students each received a $5,000 scholarship. Funding for fellowships and scholarships create a tremendous ripple effect as doctors and nurses go forward in their careers to develop their own research projects and find better ways to care for patients.

CAPITAL EQUIPMENT

Leading-edge medical care is made possible when doctors have the newest technology to diagnose and treat health issues as well as improve patients' quality of life. Saint John's Health Center Foundation has been the recipient of nearly $9 million in donations for the newest technology to provide exceptional care and comfort to members of our community. These advancements—made possible by benevolent donors—have made an immense impact on the healing provided at Saint John's.

SPECIAL MENTION

Since 1987, the Irene Dunne Guild (IDG) has raised more than $17 million to support Saint John's Health Center Foundation. During the last three years alone, it raised and contributed more than $406,000 for the Power of Partnership campaign. The dedicated and dynamic members of the IDG share Saint John's commitment to providing leading-edge medicine and compassionate care. Their magnanimous philanthropy demonstrates the power of partnership, and their volunteerism through Angels of the ER, Treats for Caregivers and the Irene Dunne Guild Gift Shop, enhances the health and lives of our patients and hardworking caregivers.

The background is a deep blue gradient. It features abstract, glowing blue lines and dots that form a network-like pattern, reminiscent of a star map or a digital network. The lines are thin and curved, creating a sense of depth and movement. The dots are small, bright blue spheres that act as nodes in the network. The overall effect is a futuristic and elegant aesthetic.
